

The Royal College of Pathologists

Pathology: the science behind the cure

Lab Coat

Many people think that pathologists only work in labs or mortuaries but that's not the case. Many pathologists work in clinics and hospital wards, taking direct care of patients.

Even those who work in labs don't spend all day there - they are vital members of multi-disciplinary teams of doctors and nurses who work together to ensure that every patient gets the best possible care.